Since 2011, I have been training and coaching corporate, academic, and private clients in the art of presenting individually and on teams, in person and virtually. I lead presentation skills demonstrations and workshops for individuals and groups in person, via videoconference, and over the phone. I coach adults and teens privately in interview/audition preparation as well as in confidence building for speaking in front of others. In high schools and universities, I teach courses on public speaking and the basics of presentation.

I have great success in coaching team presentations. As a working, award-winning theatrical director, I use my expertise in motivating and orchestrating ensembles to work with teams to present as a cohesive and coherent whole while focusing on and highlighting each individual. Working with Mohr Collaborative, I have coached more than 100 teams to pitch their innovative business transformation plans to the senior executives of their firms.

As a training consultant for Ovation I teach presentation skills, conduct workshops in executive presence, and specialize in coaching storytelling. Trainings are offered both in person and virtually.
